Ford and Carter to debate issues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Republicans' Middle America ticket of Gerald R. Ford and Robert Dole leaves this city with promises of support from the once-divided GOP convention for its underdog team and primed for debate with Democrat Jimmy Carter.

Ford took the initiative Thursday night when he launched his campaign against Carter with a challenge to "debate the real issues face to face." Before the Republican convention adjourned, Carter accepted.

From his home in Plains, Ga., Carter called on Ford to join him in a debate or series of debates that would provide "the fullest and most detailed examination of the programs offered by both sides."

The debate challenge wasn't in the advance text of Ford's speech accepting the presidential nomination.

"I am ready and eager," he told the delegates "to go before the American people and debate the real issues, face to face with Jimmy Carter. The people have a right to know where we both stand."

The delegates roared their approval in what was probably the most emotional and most spontaneous response Ford received during the convention.

But the final emotional moment belonged to the man Ford defeated. After his acceptance speech, Ford called Ronald Reagan and his wife, Nancy, to the podium.

It was gesture of unity often seen in the closing moments of national political conventions. The victor and the vanquished stand together to demonstrate to their followers that the contest is over and it is time to unite against the common enemy.

But when Reagan began to speak, the hall grew silent. He recalled the cheers that had greeted his arrival in the hall hours earlier. "They give us a memory that will live in our hearts forever," he said.

Among the delegates who had given Reagan 1,070 votes, 60 short of the majority he sought for the presidential nomination, many wept.

The former California governor referred to the "erosion of freedom that has taken place under Democratic rule."

He told the delegates that although they belonged to a minority party, their actions could significantly affect the course of American history.

"We must go forward fro here united, determined," Reagan said.

Then he embraced Betty Ford, and greeted others on the podium. Minutes later, the convention ended.

After his defeat Wednesday night, Reagan pledged to campaign for Ford. And Ford acknowledged the pledge in his acceptance speech when he said that "after the scrimmages of the past few months, it really feels good to have Ron Reagan on the same side of the line."

But only the campaign itself will demonstrate whether the show of unity that ended the Republican convention or the one that ended the Democratic convention a month earlier will hold up, whether wounds will heal, whether supporters of the losers will work with enthusiasm for the victors.

In an Associated Press survey of Reagan supporters at the convention, 80 per cent of the more than 600 who responded said they would work for the Ford-Dole ticket. But more than one-third of those who said they'd work also indicated most of their effort will go to the campaigns of other Republican candidates.

The survey turned up almost no support for a third-party effort among the backers of the conservative Californian.

And the Reagan delegates joined with Ford backers to interrupt the President with applause 63 times during his acceptance speech Thursday night.

"I have been called an unelected president, an accidental president," Ford said.

"Having become vice president and president, without expecting or seeking either," he added, "I have a special feeling toward these high offices.

"To me, the presidency and the vice presidency were not prizes to be won, but a duty to be done.

"So tonight, it is not the power and glamour of the presidency that leads me to ask for another four years. It is something every hard-working American will understand — the challenge of a job well begun, but far from finished."

He appealed for unity and support from the convention and for a mandate from the nation that watched and listened.

His speech contained the expected attacks on the Democratic Congress and inevitable contrasts to the policies of his predecessor in the White House, Richard M. Nixon.

It also included acknowledgement of his underdog position and another of his frequent tributes to Harry S. Truman, who won a come-from-behind victory in 1948 against Thomas E. Dewey and what Truman branded the "do-nothing 80th Congress."

In tones reminiscent of Truman's campaign, Ford attacked the "vote-hungry, free-spending Congressional majority."

He said the Democratic platform "talks about tax reform, but there's one big problem — their own Congress won't act."

In similar references to Democratic platform positions on school busing and crime, Ford concluded with the same refrain: "Their own Congress won't act."

"My friends, Washington is not the problem — their Congress is the problem," he said.

The President never mentioned Nixon by name, but Ford recalled how he came to the presidency:

"It was an hour of our history that troubled our minds and tore at our hearts. Anger and hatred had risen to dangerous levels, dividing friends and families. The polarization of our political order had aroused unworthy passions of reprisal and revenge."

There were other problems when he took office, Ford said.

"Our economy was in the throes of runaway inflation, taking us headlong into the worst recession since Franklin D. Roosevelt took the same oath," said the President.

But first, there was the debate challenge which caught Carter's staff by surprise.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford had been considering issuing the challenge for the past 10 days. He said it was left out of the advance text of the speech because Ford wanted to save it as a surprise for the delegates.

Carter's staff protested references to their response as an acceptance of Ford's challenge. Tetysaid Carter has repeatedly said he would be willing to debate his Republican opponent, even before he knew whether it would be Ford or Reagan.

The Carter staff said they would rather have their statement thought of as a counter challenge than an acceptance. They had planned to issue Carter's challenge this morning, but they released it Thursday night at a hastily called news conference before Ford had even finished his acceptance speech.

Earlier, Dole's name was put in nomination by Vice President Nelson A. Rockefeller, who had difficulty getting the podium microphone to work.

One of the seconding speeches was given by Sen. Paul Laxalt of Nevada, co-chairman of the Reagan campaign.

"The Ford-Dole ticket has the enthusiastic support of Gov. Reagan and I," said Laxalt.

Throughout the hall, delegates and spectators waved Ford-Dole signs, lettered in white on a blue background.

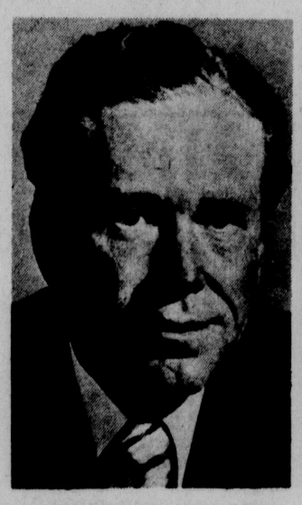
Survey indicates Hearnes has votes to gain Senate nomination

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Despite the late entry of state Treasurer James Spainhower as an active candidate for the Democratic U.S. Senate nomination, former Gov. Warren Hearnes will apparently have enough votes to become the nominee when the state party committee meets here Saturday.

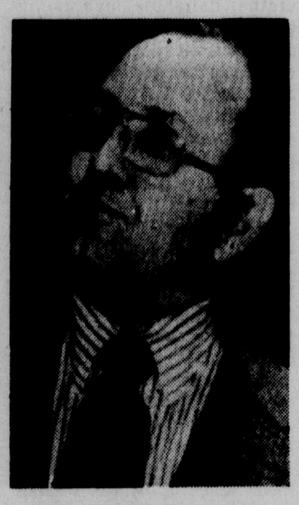
An Associated Press survey of the 60 member committee showed Hearnes with 31 supporters, Spainhower with 17 and the remainder declining to state a preference.

Thirty-one votes on the committee will be needed for the nomination. While Hearnes was given that support in the AP poll, a number of both his and Spainhower's backers indicated they had not locked themselves in to voting for their stated preference.

The poll showed the unwavering support of 27 committee members for Hearnes and 11 for Spainhower, leaving both short of the number needed to nominate but Hearnes with a commanding lead. The key to the final count, however, could be whether the balloting is done secretly or in public, an issue expected to cause heated debate at the committee meeting.



Warren Hearnes



James Spainhower

"I think we'll be close to 40," Hearnes said in an interview from his Charleston campaign headquarters as he wrapped up vote hunting efforts late this week. "We'll have no less than 37. But I've always considered myself a realist. You always have to allow for slippage."

Spainhower, while never claiming to have the needed 31 backers, has disputed Hearnes' claims and has said that at least 23 committee members support his candidacy. He said many committee members have pledged to attend the meeting with an "open mind."

"There must be some people telling different people different things," the treasurer said of the varying tallies.

Hearnes, who finished a distant second in the Aug. 3 primary, began rounding up support among committee members shortly after Congressman Jerry Litton was killed on election night as he was winning the nomination.

Other potential candidates for the nomination quickly removed themselves from contention following the primary. But since Litton's death, Spainhower has moved from a position of not being interested in facing Republican Atty. Gen. John Danforth in November for the Senate to actively pursuing the nomination for the past nine days.

Hearnes has campaigned for the nomination on the grounds that he finished second and as Moit is charged with the murder of James Edward "Jamie" Helmes Jr., 23, of Sikeston, whose body was found Aug. 8 in a drainage ditch near Diehlstadt.

Evidence at the hearing Thursday disclosed that an autopsy performed on Helmes body showed he had been shot three times and a projectile of a .380 - caliber automatic bullet was found in his brain.

A witness for the state, Jerry Alley, an employe of Quick-Chek Market at 1801 E. Malone Ave., Sikeston, testified that between 2 and 2:30 a.m. July 19, Moit attempted to sell him a .380 caliber automatic pistol for $60 and told him the weapon was hot from Florida. When asked if anyone else was present at the time, Alley replied that a neighbor to the store, Roger Anderson, was present.

Alley said the attempted sale was reported to Highway Patrol Trooper Jerry Crismon.

Lowe Seed Co. is returning distribution of products to area

The Lowe Seed Co. is returning distribution of its products to Southeast Missouri after an absence of about five years.

Company officials met Thursday at the El Capri Restaurant, with a group of area dealers, potential dealers and farmers interested in raising hybrid seed corn for the firm.

The company, once popular with area farmers, has been largely absent from Southeast Missouri for several years. Company President Edward J. Strasma said the company is now moving back into the area to stay.

Strasma, of Kankakee, Ill., said the company is looking at the possibility of a new plant in the area.

Lowe now has a plant in operation at McMullin. That plant processes corn grown in other areas, and temporarily replaced Lowe's Kankakee plant, which was destroyed five years ago by fire.

Now that the Kankakee plant is back in operation, the company hopes to begin growing seed corn again in the area. Strasma said he did not know how much acreage the firm would contract for next year.

General Sales Manager Lloyd Ullmil gave a slide presentation on the firm's agricultural research program which is conducted at several locations in the Middle West and in Hawaii.

He said the firm is producing hybrids for six zones and that all the firm's seeds are high producing varieties.

Research director Dick Graves said he believes the company is two years ahead of other firms in plant research.

He said the firm is moving back to Southeast Missouri because the company believes that this area will again become a corn growing area.

Lowes seeds considerable potential in Southeast Missouri, he added.

Graves said the company would have test plots planted next year so farmers could see how well the firm's varieties produce.

Jerry Hesselrode, 917 Arlington Road, has been named district sales manager.

Work on the controversial Dexter Creek Sewer District started this week after a delay of almost a year. Work was scheduled to start last September, but was delayed because the ground was too wet. The city decided to do the work in the district in May 1975 after petitions, both pro and con, were presented to the council. A number of people in the district -- who will have to pay for the work -- are still opposed to the project.

Sewer work in Dexter

Work on the controversial Dexter Creek Sewer District started this week after a delay of almost a year. Work was scheduled to start last September, but was delayed because the ground was too wet. The city decided to do the work in the district in May 1975 after petitions, both pro and con, were presented to the council. A number of people in the district -- who will have to pay for the work -- are still opposed to the project.

WHY THE RED CROSS NEEDS HELP

When your local Red Cross Chapter comes to you with an appeal for a contribution over and above the amount they ask in their annual fund raising campaign, there's a reason.

A whole series of unusual calamities and disasters have put an unprecedented burden upon the Red Cross. Never before have so many thousands of people needed help in such a short span of time.

First, there was the Typhoon Pamela clamity which struck more than 14,000 families. Next there were disastrous floods in Oklahoma which devastated the homes and belongings of more than 1,000 families. Then the great Teton Dam broke in Idaho, and another 5,000 families were left in great need. And, as though we haven't had enough to contend with, another 4,000 people have just been caught in the Big Thompson Canyon flash flood in Colorado. Folks in campers and trailers were left stranded, with everything destroyed and no way to get home. A great number who lived in homes along Route 34, including those who lived in sturdy brick homes, saw everything washed away. As with the others, they were in need of everything — food, clothing, shelter, and medical care.

And that doesn't include any of the "minor" disasters which the Red Cross contends with routinely.

As a result, Red Cross emergency reserves have been drained, and in order to continue its mission of mercy, the Red Cross itself is in dire need of additional funding.

Americans have always responded generously when they know the need is great. Now is the time to make an extra contribution to the local chapter of the Red Cross, designated for disaster relief.

ULTIMATE TV LAWYER

Human nature being whatit is,notmuch can probably be done about "the law's delay" of which Shakespeare complained. Thanks to the computer, however, lawyers are being relieved of the delay and tedium involved in preparing cases.

An outstanding example of computerized legal research is a system called LEXIS, developed and marketed by Mead Data Central, Inc. Law firms, law schools, government agencies and others subscribing to the system have central computer.

In a typical example, a lawyer, using a typewriterlike keyboard, asks the computer what cases it has in its memory on a broad subject, such as civil disobedience in opposition to school busing. There are, say, 15 of these.

On command from the lawyer, the computer next displays the titles of each of the 15 references and if one looks promising, the lawyer asks it to display part of the text. If that seems appropriate for his case, he directs the computer to display the full text. Finally, he can press a key and a high - speed printer will type out the complete text for his use.

LEXIS contains every decision of the U.S. Supreme Court since 1938, all federal courts of appeals since 1959 and all district courts since 1970. It also has comprehensive collections of tax, securities and trade regulation law, as well as corporate annual reports. In addition, it currently has the state court decisions of California, Illinois, Kansas, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

Just to keep the service up to date, 850 new decisions are added to the memory bank every week, and the job of adding earlier federal cases and the law of additional states is proceeding as fast as possible.

"No longer must legal research consume hours of a lawyers' time," says Mead president Jerome S. Rubin. The computer, he says, may even result in smaller fees for lawyer's services by making them more efficient.

If so that would be the most startling development of all.

LIFE-OR-DEATH ISSUE

Inflation is a word that strikes fear into the hearts of even the bravest among us. In the business sector, ever-rising operating expenses for investor-owned electric utilities make the need for enlightened regulatory policies literally a life-or-death issue. Without them, warns an analyst of public utilities securities and the money market, it becomes increasingly difficult, if not impossible, for electric utility companies to raise the capital necessary to meet future U.S. needs, let alone achieve energy independence.

Such deterioration of the private enterprise system need not occur if there is stability in utility common stocks earnings to attract investors and assure adequate revenues. "This would require much less delay in granting needed rate increases," notes the analyst, as well as, "granting obviously needed interim rate increases prior to final decisions, and developing formulae which would feed other costs, in addition to fuel costs, into the rate structures without much delay." The substantial daily costs of operating the nation's electric and nuclear generating power plants is multiplied by the expense of financing Project Independence, with the electric industry's share estimated at a staggering $107 billion of investment in research, development, plant and equipment between now and 1980.

Clearly, the electric utility industry must be profitable enough to lure the large amounts of investment dollars required by escalating costs. This means higher rates are inevitable. As the analyst puts it, "While this would cost utility customers something in the very short run, it would be to their advantage in the long, and not so long, run by reducing the soaring cost of capital to utilities, which they ultimately must pay, one way or another." Public understanding of the problems and needs of the investor-owned electric utilities is fundamental to the existence of the private enterprise system.

BUREAUCRATIC FOLLY IN NAME OF EQUALITY

That ruling by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), which would have banned father-son and mother-daughter events in public schools as violations of sex discrimination laws had it not been squelched by President Ford, is not the only—or worst—example of bureaucratic silliness emanating from this particular bureau. At least two others have come to our attention lately.

In the Perry school system near Massilon, Ohio, girls who grow moustaches or beards are henceforth barred from classrooms. The school board took this drastic action in an attempt to bring its dress code into compliance with an HEW directive. The department has said that the code discriminated against boys by limiting the length of hair and prohibiting moustaches or beards without applying similar restrictions to girls.

"To be equal, we'll have to do something about the length of boys' skirts," said school board member George Anderson during debate on the code. That step was not taken, however, so the school may still be in trouble when the HEW watchdogs find out about it.

Meanwhile, down in Shreveport, La., the Caddo Parish school system has been threatened by HEW with a cut-off of almost $700,000 in federal aid because there are more black children than white children in special education classes. The fact that there are 1,300 black children and only 900 white children enrolled in the parish's programs for the mentally retarded amounts to racial discrimination, the department alleges.

"That's the most preposterous thing I've ever heard of," says school board president Joe Garner. "What are we supposed to do, recruit? What will the federal government think of next?"

That's a question whose answer we tremble to speculate upon.

The worth of a smile: Not long ago there appeared in the newspapers the story of a little boy who had come in contact with a live wire that had been allowed to be unguarded. It touched one side of his face, burning and paralyzing it.

In court the boy's lawyer asked the little fellow to turn toward the jury and smile. He tried. One side of his face smiled, but the injured side puckered up in a hideous and pitiful contortion. The jury took just twenty minutes to award the boy twenty thousand dollars. That was certified as the legal value of a smile.

The moral is, if a smile is worth twenty thousand dollars after it is lost, it must be worth that much while it still exists. A safe conclusion is that a friendly smile, and a genuine interest in our fellowmen, are essential to success in life.

Red tape is neither new nor strictly an American bureaucratic invention. The painter exploits the limitations of his frame. The poet welcomes the discipline of the sonnet form." Inside Labor

British Unions give Ideology a holiday,
—Slash wage demands to save nation

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is the national leader of Britain's powerful labor movement known as the Trades Union Congress (TUC) – English counterpart of the more conservative AFL-CIO. For the second year now, the TUC has agreed to cut its wage demands in an effort to save the nation from what almost became a Weimar (German) Republic-inflation route. Here, this leader explains why the TUC went into a "social contract" with government and industry.

By LIONEL MURRAY
General Secretary,
Trades Union Congress

LONDON— The role of the Trades Union Congress in the present British economic situation is one of major importance. Without working agreement between the government and the unions, there can be little hope of stabilizing the economy and breaking out of the present inflationary spiral.

Already the social contract -- voluntarily limiting wage claims -- agreed on last year between the two sides, and continued this year, has more than halved the rate of inflation. The balance of payments has been cut in half and losses through strikes are down. Last year the days lost were only a quarter of the figure of three years ago, the lowest for seven years.

To look at the present economic climate and the way that the TUC can help to improve it, it is necessary to look at what has happened over the last two years.

During that time a close relationship has been developed between the Labor government and the TUC which goes back to Labor's time in opposition. A program of cooperation was set up by the two sides which encompassed such developments as improvements in old age pensions, improvements in food subsidies and action on rents.

Legislation wanted by the TUC has now been introduced and the Conservatives' "penalizing" Industrial Relations Act has been wiped out by those acts. The introduction of this legislation means a change of policy which has important implications for the Trade Union movement. It means that the TUC has accepted a range of new responsibilities under the legislation, at the same time reaffirming the movement's basic rights to negotiate freely once the economic climate is suitable.

This period has also seen the development of a new active labor market policy. It has seen the beginnings of a new system of industrial conciliation and arbitration. Some trade union leaders are taking up positions as chairmen of the relevant organizations, an active participation that would not have previously been thought possible.

The TUC hasn't got everything it wanted. The government still hasn't been convinced that it should see international trade policy within the context of industrial policy.

The most significant lack of achievement so far has been on the unemployment front. The blame for this must mainly fall on the previous Conservative government whose policies naturally led to unemployment. The Labor Government has made steps at reducing the level -- which certainly would have continued to rise if the Tory policies were still being implemented.

The world recession has had a major impact on Great Britain as it has had on all industrialized countries. It now looks as though the situation is improving, but unemployment levels are still high in the industrialized countries and that is something which has to be dealt with on the international as well as national level. The world recession is beginning to get better, but improvements in the United States, Germany and the other industrialized countries are progressing very slowly.

Unemployment in Great Britain is still not excessively high by the standards of some other industrialized countries and is certainly low in contrast to the less developed countries. By the introduction of new policies we aim to reduce the level of unemployment by 1978 to the 1973 level of 600,000, a reduction of over half a million from the present figure.

The basis for those future policies lies with the present pay policy. This has been remarkably successful during the past year. And for those reasons the TUC has overwhelmingly agreed to continue the social contract for yet another year.

When the policy was first adopted last year, the annual rate of inflation was at a level which was not only intolerable for housewives and pensioners but which endangered jobs as well. The annual rate of inflation was at a level of 30 per cent and rising. Today it is under 19 per cent and falling.

The social contract – which is in part a voluntary way of regulating pay increases – has broken through the previous inflationary attitudes of people who demanded higher wages based on expectations of a higher and higher rate of inflation, and by doing so in fact generated the very condition they were trying to protect-themselves from.

No one is going to pretend we don't still face a very serious situation, but now we know that we can achieve success. We are the only major industrialized country to halve our balance of payments and to raise our share of the world trade. We know there is a massive exports boom underway. Within a short time Great Britain will be the only major industrial country to be self-sufficient in energy – coal, oil and gas.

For the first time for many year this country will be able to bring all our resources of skill, experience, knowledge and industrial cooperation into play.

That close working relationship between the unions and the government, which both sides are striving so hard towards and which already has achieved so much, is going to be the basis for a brighter economic and social future for Great Britain.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

When public schools become intolerable because of crime, drugs, immorality, teen-age pregnancies, veneral disease, failure to teach moral values, lack of discipline or failure to teach basic skills such as reading and writing, the rich and the well-to-do have an alternative.

They just take their children out of public schools and put them in private schools. They can afford to assume the double financial burden of paying school taxes for public schools plus tuition payments for private schools.

Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., and Rep. James Delaney, also of New York, developed a plan to establish the economic right of parents to send their children to the school of their choice, without tax discrimination. It was a plan to grant an income tax deduction of up to $1,000 a year for each child's tuition paid to any school.

When Buckley proposed this as an amendment to the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the Senate rejected it, choosing instead a substitute version which would allow a tax credit for college tuition only, but not for elementary and secondary school tuition.

This so-called compromise was a cheat on the American public because it limited the benefit to a favored few instead of making it available to all.

It would make the discrimination against parents who send their children to private grade and high schools even more intolerable than it is now.

It was particularly disappointing to note that some of the Senate's most prominent conservatives voted "no" on the Buckley amendment. No wonder conservatives sometimes get the reputation of having no compassion for the little fellow!

While some parents are transferring their children to private schools in order to give them religious and moral training, a group of parents in St. Louis County has chosen to keep their children in public schools and fight a court battle to eliminate the anti-religious atmosphere there. These parents are suing 23 school districts for allegedly teaching a religion called "secular humanism" that denies the existence of God.

Many people believe that secular humanism is the religion of most public schools and governmental institutions and agencies in the United States today. It denies God, the Bible and divine revelation, and teaches that man's reason is all we need to accomplish everything.

The St. Louis parents are basing their case on the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision of Abington vs. Schempp. Although this is the famous case that prohibited Bible reading in the public schools, it also held that the state may not establish a "religion of secularism" by affirmatively opposing or showing hostility to religion, or by "preferring those who believe in no religion over those who do believe."

The Buckely-Delaney bill to assert parents' economic rights in private education, and the St. Louis lawsuit to assert parents' legal rights in public education, are hopeful signs that alternative approaches to the problems in the public schools are in the making.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hays: The Final Chapter

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The meanest man in Congress, Rep. Wayne Hays, D.-Ohio, has given up the fight. He has been brought down by a bosomy blonde who wanted publicity to sell a book and promote herself. This is the story of his final days.

It's the story of an outrageous, shoot-from-the-hip curmudgeon who abused his power. But it is also the story of a tired old man, deeply in love with his wife, bedeviled by his former mistress, weary of the turmoil.

He talked of killing himself to spare his wife more painful publicity. He took an overdose of sleeping pills -- by mistake, he later insisted. Finally, he decided to withdraw from Congress for the sake of his wife's parents.

By sheer orneriness, Hays became one of the most powerful men in the House. He was "mean, arrogant, cantankerous and tough," he admitted to his colleagues. They kept out of his way.

Most of them enjoyed his plight, therefore, when Elizabeth Ray revealed to the world their sordid relationship. It was a story we had turned down two years earlier. She had called our office in a hysterical crying fit. She was about to lose her job, she sobbed, because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

We learned that she was having an affair with Hays, all right. But she also performed secretarial services in return for her congressional salary. Our associates, Jack Cloherty and Bob Owens, called on her in her office. Contrary to her later claims, she could type and answer the phone. They saw her do it.

She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. From sources who knew her well, we established that she had not become Hays' mistress against her will. On the contrary, he had tried to break off the relationship. Then she had threatened to take her story to the press. Other times, she had threatened to cause a scene in his office unless he took her out.

She staged at least one scene after a heated argument about Hays' impending marriage to another secretary, Pat Peak. The Capitol police were summoned to remove Ray from the congressman's office. Afterward, she phoned a friend, who later told us about the call. "I really put on a good act," Ray boasted. "I made the police feel sorry for me."

Hays went ahead with the marriage, and his spurned mistress told her story to the Washington Post. There is reason to believe that she had been preparing material for a book all along, a book that she later sold.

Hays at first denied having an affair with Elizabeth Ray. "Hell, I'm a happily married man," he said. He lied, his friends say, to protect his marriage. But the Washington Post reporters had carefully nailed down the evidence. He finally confessed to having had a "personal relationship" with Ray. He denied, however, that she did no work for her government salary.

Sources close to Hays say the publicity almost wrecked the new marriage. He would plunge into a deep gloom or suddenly cheer up, they say, in direct relationship to how his wife was reacting.

At one point, we persuaded the harassed Hays to drop by our office. He was not the churlish, defiant curmudgeon we had known. The old fire was gone. He was totally subdued. He slumped into our office; he spoke in a voice barely audible.

He told of the effect the publicity was having on his wife. To spare her further anguish, he said: "I would put a bullet through my head." Then he added meaningfully: "And I've got the guts to do it."

He made similar statements to a congressman who later reported it to us. But after he recovered from an overdose of sleeping pills, he swore it had not been a suicide attempt.

Subsequently, we spoke to him on the phone in Ohio. He was encouraged by the favorable polls and friendly crowds, he said. All his campaign lieutenants, he added, wanted him to stay in the race. He talked like a man who intended to run for reelection.

We learned, meanwhile, that Hays had put a man on the U.S. payroll who did less work than Liz Ray. He is a Democratic party worker named Paul Pendergast who draws $17,235 a year as an Assistant Sergeant at Arms. Yet he doesn't even have a desk in the Sergeant at Arms office.

Instead, we found that he was working for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. His duties are strictly political; his main function is to raise funds for Democratic congressional candidates.

The Democrats pay him $20,000 a year. But thanks to Hays, Pendergast also draws another $17,235 in federal pay. The federal appointment also makes him eligible for a generous pension and other benefits unavailable in the political post.

We called Hays last Thursday for his comment. Back came a statement that he had merely followed precedent and had been backed by the House leadership. A few hours later, he announced his decision to retire from the House. His press secretary, Carol Clawson, said he made the decision after getting our inquiry.

But Hays told friends that he threw in the towel not because of our story but because of a prolonged Washington Post investigation of his father-in-law, Leonard Peak. The aggravation had sent Peak to the hospital and had upset his wife, a heart patient, Hays charged.

He claimed he had planned to leave Congress after another term anyway. "I didn't want someone killed over two more years in Congress," he said.

LIFE-OR-DEATH ISSUE

Inflation is a word that strikes fear into the hearts of even the bravest among us. In the business sector, ever-rising operating expenses for investor-owned electric utilities make the need for enlightened regulatory policies literally a life-or-death issue. Without them, warns an analyst of public utilities securities and the money market, it becomes increasingly difficult, if not impossible, for electric utility companies to raise the capital necessary to meet future U.S. needs, let alone achieve energy independence.

Such deterioration of the private enterprise system need not occur if there is stability in utility common stocks earnings to attract investors and assure adequate revenues. "This would require much less delay in granting needed rate increases," notes the analyst, as well as, "granting obviously needed interim rate increases prior to final decisions, and developing formulae which would feed other costs, in addition to fuel costs, into the rate structures without much delay." The substantial daily costs of operating the nation's electric and nuclear generating power plants is multiplied by the expense of financing Project Independence, with the electric industry's share estimated at a staggering $107 billion of investment in research, development, plant and equipment between now and 1980.

Clearly, the electric utility industry must be profitable enough to lure the large amounts of investment dollars required by escalating costs. This means higher rates are inevitable. As the analyst puts it, "While this would cost utility customers something in the very short run, it would be to their advantage in the long, and not so long, run by reducing the soaring cost of capital to utilities, which they ultimately must pay, one way or another." Public understanding of the problems and needs of the investor-owned electric utilities is fundamental to the existence of the private enterprise system.

BUREAUCRATIC FOLLY IN NAME OF EQUALITY

That ruling by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW), which would have banned father-son and mother-daughter events in public schools as violations of sex discrimination laws had it not been squelched by President Ford, is not the only—or worst—example of bureaucratic silliness emanating from this particular bureau. At least two others have come to our attention lately.

In the Perry school system near Massilon, Ohio, girls who grow moustaches or beards are henceforth barred from classrooms. The school board took this drastic action in an attempt to bring its dress code into compliance with an HEW directive. The department has said that the code discriminated against boys by limiting the length of hair and prohibiting moustaches or beards without applying similar restrictions to girls.

"To be equal, we'll have to do something about the length of boys' skirts," said school board member George Anderson during debate on the code. That step was not taken, however, so the school may still be in trouble when the HEW watchdogs find out about it.

Meanwhile, down in Shreveport, La., the Caddo Parish school system has been threatened by HEW with a cut-off of almost $700,000 in federal aid because there are more black children than white children in special education classes. The fact that there are 1,300 black children and only 900 white children enrolled in the parish's programs for the mentally retarded amounts to racial discrimination, the department alleges.

"That's the most preposterous thing I've ever heard of," says school board president Joe Garner. "What are we supposed to do, recruit? What will the federal government think of next?"

That's a question whose answer we tremble to speculate upon.

The worth of a smile: Not long ago there appeared in the newspapers the story of a little boy who had come in contact with a live wire that had been allowed to be unguarded. It touched one side of his face, burning and paralyzing it.

In court the boy's lawyer asked the little fellow to turn toward the jury and smile. He tried. One side of his face smiled, but the injured side puckered up in a hideous and pitiful contortion. The jury took just twenty minutes to award the boy twenty thousand dollars. That was certified as the legal value of a smile.

The moral is, if a smile is worth twenty thousand dollars after it is lost, it must be worth that much while it still exists. A safe conclusion is that a friendly smile, and a genuine interest in our fellowmen, are essential to success in life.

There is the amusing story of the clock that decided to quit when it found it would have to tick 31,536,000 times a year. It was too big a job.

But when a clever salesman told the clock it would only have to tick once a second, well, the clock figured that wasn't so bad, and so has been ticking on and on ever since.

Don't look at the big job, but tear it down and look at it in "little jobs." The big job then seems easier.

RED TAPE

Red tape is neither new nor strictly an American bureaucratic invention. It is said that there was a time when the windows of Windsor Castle were never washed on the inside and outside at the same time. The outside of the windows was under the jurisdiction of Woods and Forrests, while the inside was under the jurisdiction of the Lord stewards. It took a forced meeting of the two departments before both sides of the windows could be washed on the same day.—Sunshine Magazine.

DISCIPLINE

"Discipline is not only a business necessity," says David Bernstein, creative director of McCann-Erickson, London, "it is also a creative neccessity. And any so-called creative man who rebels—shouting 'the true artist must be free' or similar slogans—is neither professional nor a true artist. A true artist respects constraints. The painter exploits the limitations of his frame. The poet welcomes the discipline of the sonnet form." In short, the challenge of constraint fires the creative man's imagination and inspires him to outdo himself.—Martin Fox.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

British Unions give Ideology a holiday,
—Slash wage demands to save nation

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is the national leader of Britain's powerful labor movement known as the Trades Union Congress (TUC) -- English counterpart of the more conservative AFL-CIO. For the second year now, the TUC has agreed to cut its wage demands in an effort to save the nation from what almost became a Weimar (German) Republic-inflation route. Here, this leader explains why the TUC went into a "social contract" with government and industry.

By LIONEL MURRAY
General Secretary,
Trades Union Congress

LONDON— The role of the Trades Union Congress in the present British economic situation is one of major importance. Without working agreement between the government and the unions, there can be little hope of stabilizing the economy and breaking out of the present inflationary spiral.

Already the social contract -- voluntarily limiting wage claims -- agreed on last year between the two sides, and continued this year, has more than halved the rate of inflation. The balance of payments has been cut in half and losses through strikes are down. Last year the days lost were only a quarter of the figure of three years ago, the lowest for seven years.

To look at the present economic climate and the way that the TUC can help to improve it, it is necessary to look at what has happened over the last two years.

During that time a close relationship has been developed between the Labor government and the TUC which goes back to Labor's time in opposition. A program of cooperation was set up by the two sides which encompassed such developments as improvements in old age pensions, improvements in food subsidies and action on rents.

Legislation wanted by the TUC has now been introduced and the Conservatives' "penalizing" Industrial Relations Act has been wiped out by those acts. The introduction of this legislation means a change of policy which has important implications for the Trade Union movement. It means that the TUC has accepted a range of new responsibilities under the legislation, at the same time reaffirming the movement's basic rights to negotiate freely once the economic climate is suitable.

This period has also seen the development of a new active labor market policy. It has seen the beginnings of a new system of industrial conciliation and arbitration. Some trade union leaders are taking up positions as chairmen of the relevant organizations, an active participation that would not have previously been thought possible.

The TUC hasn't got everything it wanted. The government still hasn't been convinced that it should see international trade policy within the context of industrial policy.

The most significant lack of achievement so far has been on the unemployment front. The blame for this must mainly fall on the previous Conservative government whose policies naturally led to unemployment. The Labor Government has made steps at reducing the level -- which certainly would have continued to rise if the Tory policies were still being implemented.

The world recession has had a major impact on Great Britain as it has had on all industrialized countries. It now looks as though the situation is improving, but unemployment levels are still high in the industrialized countries and that is something which has to be dealt with on the international as well as national level. The world recession is beginning to get better, but improvements in the United States, Germany and the other industrialized countries are progressing very slowly.

Unemployment in Great Britain is still not excessively high by the standards of some other industrialized countries and is certainly low in contrast to the less developed countries. By the introduction of new policies we aim to reduce the level of unemployment by 1978 to the 1973 level of 600,000, a reduction of over half a million from the present figure.

The basis for those future policies lies with the present pay policy. This has been remarkably successful during the past year. And for those reasons the TUC has overwhelmingly agreed to continue the social contract for yet another year.

When the policy was first adopted last year, the annual rate of inflation was at a level which was not only intolerable for housewives and pensioners but which endangered jobs as well. The annual rate of inflation was at a level of 30 per cent and rising. Today it is under 19 per cent and falling.

The social contract – which is in part a voluntary way of regulating pay increases – has broken through the previous inflationary attitudes of people who demanded higher wages based on expectations of a higher and higher rate of inflation, and by doing so in fact generated the very condition they were trying to protect-themselves from.

No one is going to pretend we don't still face a very serious situation, but now we know that we can achieve success. We are the only major industrialized country to halve our balance of payments and to raise our share of the world trade. We know there is a massive exports boom underway. Within a short time Great Britain will be the only major industrial country to be self-sufficient in energy – coal, oil and gas.

For the first time for many year this country will be able to bring all our resources of skill, experience, knowledge and industrial cooperation into play.

That close working relationship between the unions and the government, which both sides are striving so hard towards and which already has achieved so much, is going to be the basis for a brighter economic and social future for Great Britain.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

By PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
Copley News Service

When public schools become intolerable because of crime, drugs, immorality, teen-age pregnancies, veneral disease, failure to teach moral values, lack of discipline or failure to teach basic skills such as reading and writing, the rich and the well-to-do have an alternative.

They just take their children out of public schools and put them in private schools. They can afford to assume the double financial burden of paying school taxes for public schools plus tuition payments for private schools.

Sen. James Buckley, R-N.Y., and Rep. James Delaney, also of New York, developed a plan to establish the economic right of parents to send their children to the school of their choice, without tax discrimination. It was a plan to grant an income tax deduction of up to $1,000 a year for each child's tuition paid to any school.

When Buckley proposed this as an amendment to the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the Senate rejected it, choosing instead a substitute version which would allow a tax credit for college tuition only, but not for elementary and secondary school tuition.

This so-called compromise was a cheat on the American public because it limited the benefit to a favored few instead of making it available to all.

It would make the discrimination against parents who send their children to private grade and high schools even more intolerable than it is now.

It was particularly disappointing to note that some of the Senate's most prominent conservatives voted "no" on the Buckley amendment. No wonder conservatives sometimes get the reputation of having no compassion for the little fellow!

While some parents are transferring their children to private schools in order to give them religious and moral training, a group of parents in St. Louis County has chosen to keep their children in public schools and fight a court battle to eliminate the anti-religious atmosphere there. These parents are suing 23 school districts for allegedly teaching a religion called "secular humanism" that denies the existence of God.

Many people believe that secular humanism is the religion of most public schools and governmental institutions and agencies in the United States today. It denies God, the Bible and divine revelation, and teaches that man's reason is all we need to accomplish everything.

The St. Louis parents are basing their case on the 1963 U.S. Supreme Court decision of Abington vs. Schempp. Although this is the famous case that prohibited Bible reading in the public schools, it also held that the state may not establish a "religion of secularism" by affirmatively opposing or showing hostility to religion, or by "preferring those who believe in no religion over those who do believe."

The Buckely-Delaney bill to assert parents' economic rights in private education, and the St. Louis lawsuit to assert parents' legal rights in public education, are hopeful signs that alternative approaches to the problems in the public schools are in the making.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Hays: The Final Chapter

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON -- The meanest man in Congress, Rep. Wayne Hays, D.-Ohio, has given up the fight. He has been brought down by a bosomy blonde who wanted publicity to sell a book and promote herself. This is the story of his final days.

It's the story of an outrageous, shoot-from-the-hip curmudgeon who abused his power. But it is also the story of a tired old man, deeply in love with his wife, bedeviled by his former mistress, weary of the turmoil.

He talked of killing himself to spare his wife more painful publicity. He took an overdose of sleeping pills -- by mistake, he later insisted. Finally, he decided to withdraw from Congress for the sake of his wife's parents.

By sheer orneriness, Hays became one of the most powerful men in the House. He was "mean, arrogant, cantankerous and tough," he admitted to his colleagues. They kept out of his way.

Most of them enjoyed his plight, therefore, when Elizabeth Ray revealed to the world their sordid relationship. It was a story we had turned down two years earlier. She had called our office in a hysterical crying fit. She was about to lose her job, she sobbed, because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

We learned that she was having an affair with Hays, all right. But she also performed secretarial services in return for her congressional salary. Our associates, Jack Cloherty and Bob Owens, called on her in her office. Contrary to her later claims, she could type and answer the phone. They saw her do it.

She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. From sources who knew her well, we established that she had not become Hays' mistress against her will. On the contrary, he had tried to break off the relationship. Then she had threatened to take her story to the press. Other times, she had threatened to cause a scene in his office unless he took her out.

She staged at least one scene after a heated argument about Hays' impending marriage to another secretary, Pat Peak. The Capitol police were summoned to remove Ray from the congressman's office. Afterward, she phoned a friend, who later told us about the call. "I really put on a good act," Ray boasted. "I made the police feel sorry for me."

Hays went ahead with the marriage, and his spurned mistress told her story to the Washington Post. There is reason to believe that she had been preparing material for a book all along, a book that she later sold.

Hays at first denied having an affair with Elizabeth Ray. "Hell, I'm a happily married man," he said. He lied, his friends say, to protect his marriage. But the Washington Post reporters had carefully nailed down the evidence. He finally confessed to having had a "personal relationship" with Ray. He denied, however, that she did no work for her government salary.

Sources close to Hays say the publicity almost wrecked the new marriage. He would plunge into a deep gloom or suddenly cheer up, they say, in direct relationship to how his wife was reacting.

At one point, we persuaded the harassed Hays to drop by our office. He was not the churlish, defiant curmudgeon we had known. The old fire was gone. He was totally subdued. He slumped into our office; he spoke in a voice barely audible.

He told of the effect the publicity was having on his wife. To spare her further anguish, he said: "I would put a bullet through my head." Then he added meaningfully: "And I've got the guts to do it."

He made similar statements to a congressman who later reported it to us. But after he recovered from an overdose of sleeping pills, he swore it had not been a suicide attempt.

Subsequently, we spoke to him on the phone in Ohio. He was encouraged by the favorable polls and friendly crowds, he said. All his campaign lieutenants, he added, wanted him to stay in the race. He talked like a man who intended to run for reelection.

We learned, meanwhile, that Hays had put a man on the U.S. payroll who did less work than Liz Ray. He is a Democratic party worker named Paul Pendergast who draws $17,235 a year as an Assistant Sergeant at Arms. Yet he doesn't even have a desk in the Sergeant at Arms office.

Instead, we found that he was working for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. His duties are strictly political; his main function is to raise funds for Democratic congressional candidates.

The Democrats pay him $20,000 a year. But thanks to Hays, Pendergast also draws another $17,235 in federal pay. The federal appointment also makes him eligible for a generous pension and other benefits unavailable in the political post.

We called Hays last Thursday for his comment. Back came a statement that he had merely followed precedent and had been backed by the House leadership. A few hours later, he announced his decision to retire from the House. His press secretary, Carol Clawson, said he made the decision after getting our inquiry.

But Hays told friends that he threw in the towel not because of our story but because of a prolonged Washington Post investigation of his father-in-law, Leonard Peak. The aggravation had sent Peak to the hospital and had upset his wife, a heart patient, Hays charged.

He claimed he had planned to leave Congress after another term anyway. "I didn't want someone killed over two more years in Congress," he said.

To the residents of Sikeston:

We are writing this letter in reference to the rock concert scheduled to be held in Sikeston on Labor Day. We have been informed that the concert has been cancelled on the grounds that it would incriminate the right's of the residents of Sikeston. In our opinion, (which may not mean a geat deal to the senior citizens), the cancellation of the concert is a bitter disappointment as well as a bitter shame. We realize that the questions of marijuana and the use of "hard" drugs crowd the minds of our conservative citizens, but we are also aware that 98 per cent (an approximate guess) of the people against the concert have never even pondered the thought of attending a concert of this type.

What we are merely requesting is that our voices be heard and that we be given some answers to our questions. For instance, what could possibly be wrong with a little clean entertainment for our young people. Speaking as the youth of Sikeston, there is close to nothing to do in our small town and this all brings the same old situation back into perspective. The parents and older citizens are scared of their own children and youth. We end with one other question. Can't you give us just one chance to prove that we can handle ourselves in a respectful way, not embarrassing the older generation?

To the residents of Sikeston:

We are writing this letter in reference to the rock concert scheduled to be held in Sikeston on Labor Day. We have been informed that the concert has been cancelled on the grounds that it would incriminate the right's of the residents of Sikeston. In our opinion, (which may not mean a geat deal to the senior citizens), the cancellation of the concert is a bitter disappointment as well as a bitter shame. We realize that the questions of marijuana and the use of "hard" drugs crowd the minds of our conservative citizens, but we are also aware that 98 per cent (an approximate guess) of the people against the concert have never even pondered the thought of attending a concert of this type.

What we are merely requesting is that our voices be heard and that we be given some answers to our questions. For instance, what could possibly be wrong with a little clean entertainment for our young people. Speaking as the youth of Sikeston, there is close to nothing to do in our small town and this all brings the same old situation back into perspective. The parents and older citizens are scared of their own children and youth. We end with one other question. Can't you give us just one chance to prove that we can handle ourselves in a respectful way, not embarrassing the older generation?

Cost of gasoline, medical care jumps with .5 per cent consumer price rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer prices rose by half a percentage point for the second month in a row in July, the government said today. Food costs increased moderately but there were rapid jumps in such things as gasoline and medical care.

The five-tenths of 1 per cent advance, which amounts to a compound annual rate of 6.2 per cent, means inflation has remained virtually stable since the four-tenths of 1 per cent price increase in April.

The Labor Department said prices now stand 5.4 per cent ahead of where they were a year ago. That's the smallest year-to-year rise since the 5.1 per cent advance as of April 1973.

The pace of inflation enabled workers to expand their buying power, the department said. After-tax weekly earnings discounted for inflation grew by one-tenths of 1 per cent, reversing June's five-tenths of 1 per cent drop. For the year, inflation-adjusted earnings are up three-tenths of 1 per cent.

The Labor Department said the primary ingredients of the rise in prices were gasoline, used cars, medical care, transportation services, home loan interest rates and dairy products.

Food prices were actually up by the biggest margin in nine months — seven-tenths of 1 per cent — but since July is typically a month of higher food prices, the gain was adjusted to show a one-tenth of 1 per cent increase for the index.

Meat, poultry and fish prices, though actually up seven-tenths of 1 per cent, showed a 1.6 per cent drop after adjustment for seasonal variations and now stand 2 per cent below a year ago.

Those protein prices were offset by higher prices for coffee, eggs and dairy products. Coffee prices are 51.4 per cent above a year ago.

Commodities other than food rose by six-tenths of 1 per cent in price, the department said, with gasoline prices accounting for almost a fourth of that jump. Gasoline prices rose 1.5 per cent, leaving the average national price of a gallon of unleaded regular gasoline at 62.3 cents in July.

The costs of service were up by six-tenths of 1 per cent, with medical care showing the strongest increase. Prices for medical care had been increasing at about the same rate as consumer prices generally for the last three months, but in July the cost of medical care shot up 1.1 per cent. Medical care now costs 9.7 per cent more than it did a year ago.

The department said the latest changes in prices left its consumer price index at 171.1, meaning a market basket of goods and services costing $100 in 1967 now costs $171.10.

Peggy Pinder seconds Dole's nomination

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Her articulate views about the Republican party were first noticed by the GOP Platform Committee, which said in its platform preamble that the document was based on her perceptions.

Later she became something of a celebrity, as reporters from around the country sought interviews with her.

On the last night of the Republican National Convention, the delegates and the nation got to see and hear the 23-year-old woman from Clarinda, Iowa, who fellow Republicans and reporters had made much of.

Peggy Pinder, who despite blindness looks forward to a scholarship at the Yale Law School and years of political activity, seconded the nomination of Kansas Sen. Robert Dole as President Gerald Ford's running mate.

Peggy said she was "naturally a little nervous, but most of all I was concerned about getting my message across."

"I'm involved with the National Federation of the Blind.

"He has always supported us, consistently and aggressively," she said.

"He knows about and cares about the prejudices against the blind that are really our major problem," she said.

Peggy had a little trouble with the podium microphone.

"Vice President Rockefeller warned me when I went up that you had to speak right into it," she said.

Ann Landers

Ann says contraceptives should be available to teens

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a high school junior, disturbed by the regulations governing the sale of contraceptives.

A friend of mine who works in a drugstore buys them for me. (I'm a male.) However, many of my friends have sex without protection because it isn't readily available. Keeping contraceptives out of the hands of 16- and 17-yuear-olds does not discourage sexual intercourse. If young people want to have sex they will have it. They'd rather use protection but if it isn't available, they will go ahead and take chances.

Can you explain from an adult's viewpoint the logic behind such legislation? Two of my closest friends are suffering because of it. -- F.M. (Brookline, Mass.)

Dear F.M.: There is no logic behind such legislation. The law is a bummer. Unavailability of contraceptives will rarely discourage anybody. All that law does is hlep to increase the number of teenage pregnancies in Massachusetts.

Dear Ann Landers: I was one of the original Women's Libbers – proud of the fact that my husband encouraged me to take trips out of town "for the cause." He gave me total freedom and I loved it. All my house-bound women friends envied me. He keeps encouraging me to "do my own thing" because he was busy working. Or so I thought.

While I was "libbing it up" I later learned that Mr. Generosity was having himself a ball. The rat entertained women in our bedroom, took bimbos on weekend trips, even did the high-school bit -- made love in the car, on the beach and in a haystack.

He later bragged to me that several young girls wanted to marry him (he's 50 years old and has money, of course). So tell you "liberated" women readers not to outsmart themselves. It happened to me and I have only myself to blame. -- A Moron In Eureka, Calif.

Dear Eureka: I doubt that your freedom had much to do with your husband's alley-catting. A 50-year-old who makes love in cars, beaches, and haystacks yet, is clearly a case of arrested development. So stop blaming yourself, honey. He's bonkers.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote to you many years ago and your advice helped me a lot. I'm turning to you again with a problem I can't discuss with anyone.

How long does it take for a man to stop talking about his wife who passed away several years ago?

I am going with a widower who chased around with everything in town while his wife was living. Now that she is dead, all of a sudden she is a saint and her name is mentioned every hour. He wants me to marry him and share his home but his wife's picture is in every room and this makes me uncomfortable.

My husband died five years ago and I never mention his name because I know how I feel when my friend talks about his wife. We are both in our 60s and our children are all grown.

Shall I marry this man? I am lonely and so is he. You are going to decide. -- Very Mixed Up

Dear V.M.U.: No, I'm not. I don't have to live with him. The question you should be asking yourself: Is the irritation worth companionship in your twilight years?

Ann Landers

Ann says contraceptives should be available to teens

Dear Ann Landers: I'm a high school junior, disturbed by the regulations governing the sale of contraceptives.

A friend of mine who works in a drugstore buys them for me. (I'm a male.) However, many of my friends have sex without protection because it isn't readily available. Keeping contraceptives out of the hands of 16- and 17-yuear-olds does not discourage sexual intercourse. If young people want to have sex they will have it. They'd rather use protection but if it isn't available, they will go ahead and take chances.

Can you explain from an adult's viewpoint the logic behind such legislation? Two of my closest friends are suffering because of it. -- F.M. (Brookline, Mass.)

Dear F.M.: There is no logic behind such legislation. The law is a bummer. Unavailability of contraceptives will rarely discourage anybody. All that law does is hlep to increase the number of teenage pregnancies in Massachusetts.

Dear Ann Landers: I was one of the original Women's Libbers -- proud of the fact that my husband encouraged me to take trips out of town "for the cause." He gave me total freedom and I loved it. All my house-bound women friends envied me. He keeps encouraging me to "do my own thing" because he was busy working. Or so I thought.

While I was "libbing it up" I later learned that Mr. Generosity was having himself a ball. The rat entertained women in our bedroom, took bimbos on weekend trips, even did the high-school bit -- made love in the car, on the beach and in a haystack.

He later bragged to me that several young girls wanted to marry him (he's 50 years old and has money, of course). So tell you "liberated" women readers not to outsmart themselves. It happened to me and I have only myself to blame. -- A Moron In Eureka, Calif.

Dear Eureka: I doubt that your freedom had much to do with your husband's alley-catting. A 50-year-old who makes love in cars, beaches, and haystacks yet, is clearly a case of arrested development. So stop blaming yourself, honey. He's bonkers.

Dear Ann Landers: I wrote to you many years ago and your advice helped me a lot. I'm turning to you again with a problem I can't discuss with anyone.

How long does it take for a man to stop talking about his wife who passed away several years ago?

I am going with a widower who chased around with everything in town while his wife was living. Now that she is dead, all of a sudden she is a saint and her name is mentioned every hour. He wants me to marry him and share his home but his wife's picture is in every room and this makes me uncomfortable.

My husband died five years ago and I never mention his name because I know how I feel when my friend talks about his wife. We are both in our 60s and our children are all grown.

Shall I marry this man? I am lonely and so is he. You are going to decide. -- Very Mixed Up

Dear V.M.U.: No, I'm not. I don't have to live with him. The question you should be asking yourself: Is the irritation worth companionship in your twilight years?

Brewers win

Thomas homer helps sink Royals

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Brewers' Manager Alex Grammas says he couldn't tell you Gorman Thomas' batting average. In fact, he makes it a point not to check.

"That could affect my thinking," Grammas said. "I don't want to say, 'This guy is hitting .210. I better get him out of there.' I just look at what he does on the field and determine if he's helping the club, and I sure do think Thomas is."

He did Thursday night, belting a three-run second inning home run. Teammates Von Joshua and George Scott added triples to spark a two-run fifth, and Danny Frisella earned his eighth save as the Brewers beat the American League West leading Kansas City Royals 6-4.

The Brewers' sixth victory in seven starts left them with a 53-62 record.

Thomas, who usually had started against left-handers until Grammas gave him the regular center field job two weeks ago, homered off Dennis Leonard, 15-5, a right-hander who had entered the game with a 27-6 record since July 4, 1975.

The blast followed a single by Sixto Lezcano and a walk, erasing a 2-0 Royals' lead achieved on an RBI double by Al Cowens and Buck Martinez' sacrifice fly.

Joshua tripled leading off the Brewer fifth and scored the goahead run on Robin Yount's sacrifice fly.

Scott followed with a drive off the top of the center field wall. The relay from second baseman Frank White appeared in time to retire Scott sliding into third, but the ball skipped into the Royals' dugout and Scott scored.

Singles by Tim Johnson and Thomas, who raised his average to .210, chased Leonard in the sixth. Steve Mingori walked Joshua to load the bases, and the Brewers' final run scored as Yount beat out a checked swing roller.

Royals' Manager Whitey Herzog said he couldn't recall when Leonard had been hit that hard, and neither could Leonard.

"I really don't enjoy pitching in this park because the mound is kind of funny," he said. "I couldn't get my rhythm and was overthrowing. That doesn't work. I got behind a lot of hitters and they were just waiting for my fast ball."

Winner Jerry Augustine ,6-8, left after two out singles by Jim Wohlford and Amos Otis and a walk filled the bases in the Royals' seventh. Frisella walked Hal McRae to force in a run, but retired Mayberry on a chopper to the mound.

The last six Royals went out in order, in part because of a brilliant catch by Joshua of a Cowens drive and a diving stop by Johnson to throw out pinch hitter Tom Poquette.

"Jerry pitched on guts," Grammas said. "I never thought he'd last that long. He just wasn't popping the ball."

West to coach Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Kent Cooke ended his feud with Jerry West, hired the all-star basketball player to coach his Los Angeles Lakers and now undoubtedly will demand a championship team.

West had filed a $6-million suit against Cooke claiming the owner hadn't lived up to his last playing contract two years ago.

Cooke had filed a $2-million countersuit claiming West hadn't lived up to what was expected from him, but in an amicable news conference, the 39-year-old former star guard said, "My differences with Mr. Cooke are settled. I'm extremely pleased with the terms of the contract."

Those terms were not divulged but reports were that Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas had been offered a five-year, $350,000 contract to coach the Lakers. West's pact couldn't be less.

Called "Mr. Clutch" and "Zeke from Cabin Creek" in reference to his West Virginia background, West joined the Lakers in 1960 when they moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles. On 13 occasions, he was the National Basketball Association's all-star guard.

Admitting he'll be under pressure, West said, "I haven't seen the player yet who didn't think he's smarter than the coach."

Cooke pondered his coaching selection for six months after the end of the NBA season, the second in a row in which the Lakers failed to reach the playoffs. Then he announced that Bill Sharman would have a front office job. That turns out to be assistant general manager.

West must coach Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the 7-foot-2 All-NBA center who enters his second year with the Lakers.

"I don't plan to change his style of play," the new coach declared. "We won't have men crowding into an area so he will have more movement. We'll stress defense and I think we'll be stronger in the defensive game."

Both Sharman and Pete Newell, the Lakers' general manager, said West should be successful "because he has the necessary enthusiasm."

And the coach himself said, "I wanted this job very badly. After all, I haven't done anything for two years. I'm happy to be back in basketball."

Bulldog outlook is good one two weeks from season opener

This evening's 5:30 practice will wrap up the first week of workouts for the SHS Bulldogs and several starters have picked up minor injuries. Halfback Paul Bean and end Paul Gilbow have sustained groin injuries. Several other players are bruised, but things look generally good for the upcoming season, which starts two weeks from tonight.

Both Bean and runningmate James Wilder appear to be about 10-15 pounds heavier than they were a year ago when they combined for over 1500 yards rushing. Overall the team appears to be bigger and quicker than last season's 6-4 outfit, with nearly as much enthusiasm and desire.

Coach Terry Smith doesn't like the preseason choice of his team as conference favorites, pointing out that there are three teams that have just as good a shot at the title as the Bulldogs. They are Jackson, Poplar Bluff and Cape Central.

"That really put the pressure on us," said Smith, but so far the players seem to enjoy the pressure, with workouts being conducted in a hard-working and enthusiastic atmosphere. The home opener will be September 10 against St. Thomas Aquinas.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Scattered showers and thunderstorms during the past week have had little effect on streams and lakes around the state, the Missouri Department of Conservation reports.

Steward eliminated

Steward Steel, who held a game-and-a-half lead in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League only two weeks ago, saw whatever dim hope they had of the championship vanish last night as they lost a pair of make-up games at the complex.

Tommy Green's two-run triple in the first staked the 76'ers to a 2-0 lead as they went on to play the spoiler role and blasted Steward 10-1. The 76'ers added three more runs in the second in support of starter Tom Stinnett, who outpitched Vernie Dean for the victory. Jim Sweet homered in the fourth to account for Steward's only run.

In the nightcap, Eby's Distributing got two-hit pitching from Don Cook as they dumped Steward 7-0. Five first-inning runs made a loser off Dwight Lakin, although Eby's added two more in the second.

Steward Steel's record dropped to 14-10, four games behind the first place Eagles, who have clinched a tie for first at 16-16. Marks Food Mart still has a mathematical shot at a tie for the top spot, if the Eagles lose both their remaining games. The Eagles play Eby's Distributing Tuesday night and the Bank of Sikeston Wednesday evening. The Bank could finish in third place by knocking off the leaders.

Bi-State playoffs delayed

The Sikeston Saints game, scheduled for tonight at Cape against the Capahas has been postponed until Sunday because the Caps couldn't get enough ballplayers. The delay will mean that the Saints will have been off a whole week, possibly making the team rusty, and at the same time the Capahas' two ace starters---Randy Johnson and Trae Hastings---will have had ample rest.

The tournament has been rescheduled as a doubleheader Sunday at Capaha Park, then a single game Monday night at Sikeston if necessary. Opposing Johnson and Hastings for the Saints will be the team's top two winners---Bob Blankenship (6-2) and Don Miller (4-1).

A Monday night starter for either side is yet to be determined.

West to coach Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jack Kent Cooke ended his feud with Jerry West, hired the all-star basketball player to coach his Los Angeles Lakers and now undoubtedly will demand a championship team.

West had filed a $6-million suit against Cooke claiming the owner hadn't lived up to his last playing contract two years ago.

Cooke had filed a $2-million countersuit claiming West hadn't lived up to what was expected from him, but in an amicable news conference, the 39-year-old former star guard said, "My differences with Mr. Cooke are settled. I'm extremely pleased with the terms of the contract."

Those terms were not divulged but reports were that Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas had been offered a five-year, $350,000 contract to coach the Lakers. West's pact couldn't be less.

Called "Mr. Clutch" and "Zeke from Cabin Creek" in reference to his West Virginia background, West joined the Lakers in 1960 when they moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles. On 13 occasions, he was the National Basketball Association's all-star guard.

Admitting he'll be under pressure, West said, "I haven't seen the player yet who didn't think he's smarter than the coach."

Cooke pondered his coaching selection for six months after the end of the NBA season, the second in a row in which the Lakers failed to reach the playoffs. Then he announced that Bill Sharman would have a front office job. That turns out to be assistant general manager.

West must coach Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, the 7-foot-2 All-NBA center who enters his second year with the Lakers.

"I don't plan to change his style of play," the new coach declared. "We won't have men crowding into an area so he will have more movement. We'll stress defense and I think we'll be stronger in the defensive game."

Both Sharman and Pete Newell, the Lakers' general manager, said West should be successful "because he has the necessary enthusiasm."

And the coach himself said, "I wanted this job very badly. After all, I haven't done anything for two years. I'm happy to be back in basketball."

Bulldog outlook is good one two weeks from season opener

This evening's 5:30 practice will wrap up the first week of workouts for the SHS Bulldogs and several starters have picked up minor injuries. Halfback Paul Bean and end Paul Gilbow have sustained groin injuries. Several other players are bruised, but things look generally good for the upcoming season, which starts two weeks from tonight.

Both Bean and runningmate James Wilder appear to be about 10-15 pounds heavier than they were a year ago when they combined for over 1500 yards rushing. Overall the team appears to be bigger and quicker than last season's 6-4 outfit, with nearly as much enthusiasm and desire.

Coach Terry Smith doesn't like the preseason choice of his team as conference favorites, pointing out that there are three teams that have just as good a shot at the title as the Bulldogs. They are Jackson, Poplar Bluff and Cape Central.

"That really put the pressure on us," said Smith, but so far the players seem to enjoy the pressure, with workouts being conducted in a hard-working and enthusiastic atmosphere. The home opener will be September 10 against St. Thomas Aquinas.

Missouri Fishing Report

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Scattered showers and thunderstorms during the past week have had little effect on streams and lakes around the state, the Missouri Department of Conservation reports.

Steward eliminated

Steward Steel, who held a game-and-a-half lead in the Sikeston Fastpitch Softball League only two weeks ago, saw whatever dim hope they had of the championship vanish last night as they lost a pair of make-up games at the complex.

Tommy Green's two-run triple in the first staked the 76'ers to a 2-0 lead as they went on to play the spoiler role and blasted Steward 10-1. The 76'ers added three more runs in the second in support of starter Tom Stinnett, who outpitched Vernie Dean for the victory. Jim Sweet homered in the fourth to account for Steward's only run.

In the nightcap, Eby's Distributing got two-hit pitching from Don Cook as they dumped Steward 7-0. Five first-inning runs made a loser off Dwight Lakin, although Eby's added two more in the second.

Steward Steel's record dropped to 14-10, four games behind the first place Eagles, who have clinched a tie for first at 16-16. Marks Food Mart still has a mathematical shot at a tie for the top spot, if the Eagles lose both their remaining games. The Eagles play Eby's Distributing Tuesday night and the Bank of Sikeston Wednesday evening. The Bank could finish in third place by knocking off the leaders.

Bi-State playoffs delayed

The Sikeston Saints game, scheduled for tonight at Cape against the Capahas has been postponed until Sunday because the Caps couldn't get enough ballplayers. The delay will mean that the Saints will have been off a whole week, possibly making the team rusty, and at the same time the Capahas' two ace starters---Randy Johnson and Trae Hastings---will have had ample rest.

The tournament has been rescheduled as a doubleheader Sunday at Capaha Park, then a single game Monday night at Sikeston if necessary. Opposing Johnson and Hastings for the Saints will be the team's top two winners---Bob Blankenship (6-2) and Don Miller (4-1).

A Monday night starter for either side is yet to be determined.

WHAT DOES THE CITY MANAGEMENT FORM OF GOVERNMENT DO FOR ME?

Q.-Why was the Council-Manager form of government developed?

A.-It was developed to fight machine politics and to compensate for the weaknesses of the Mayor and Commission forms of government. The first Council-Manager city was Galvaston, Texas in 1901. Excelsior Springs was the first Council-Manager City in Missouri in 1922. Since 1922, the number of communities with the Council-Manager form has increased to 50 and the communities have a combined population of 1,386,034 in 1970.

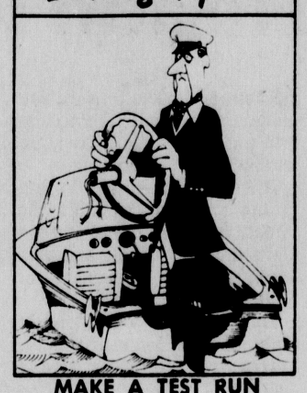
Boating Tips...



MAKE A TEST RUN

After a lengthy layoff, make your first boating venture a trial run. Be aware that despite careful layup and storage, some things just may not work the way they are expected to. The boating experts at Mercury outboards suggest you watch for the following: erratic operation of instruments; loose or stiff steering and control systems; minor leaks; sticking or leaking drain plug; dim or inoperative navigation lights; loose hardware. It's less annoying and often safer to make repairs close to home, and then go for a cruise with peace-of-mind.

First National, Strickland win

First National Bank defeated Clinton Construction 13-2 in the loser's bracket and Strickland downed Citizen's Bank 14-4 in the winner's bracket as play in the Senior Division softball tournament continued at Puckett Field Thursday night.

First National scored thirteen runs on only four hits as they downed Clinton. Connie Spears was the winning pitcher.

Strickland trailed 4-0 at one point, but rallied to take an easy victory over Citizen's Bank. Ten of Strickland's runs came in the final two innings.

First National meets Citizen's Bank at 6:30 tonight, with thewinner meeting Strickland afterward. One more victory would clinch the championship for Strickland.

Sikeston teams split

The two Sikeston teams in the nine and ten year old division of the Charleston Little League tournament split a pair of games Thursday night, the Aces beating Matthews 27-0 and the All-Stars dropping a 6-3 game to New Madrid.

Jon Fair ripped a grandslam homer to lead a 14-hit attack in the Aces romp over Matthews. The winners scored 13 times in the fifth and added bursts of six runs in the second and sixth innings. Chris Stewart picked up the win. He and his relievers allowed Matthews only two hits.

The All-Stars managed to score three runs in the sixth, but it was too little as they fell to New Madrid 6-3. Ken Lathem had the only hit for the All-Stars, a triple. Campbell picked up the win for New Madrid. Doyle Hutton was the loser.

Sikeston teams split

The two Sikeston teams in the nine and ten year old division of the Charleston Little League tournament split a pair of games Thursday night, the Aces beating Matthews 27-0 and the All-Stars dropping a 6-3 game to New Madrid.

Jon Fair ripped a grandslam homer to lead a 14-hit attack in the Aces romp over Matthews. The winners scored 13 times in the fifth and added bursts of six runs in the second and sixth innings. Chris Stewart picked up the win. He and his relievers allowed Matthews only two hits.

The All-Stars managed to score three runs in the sixth, but it was too little as they fell to New Madrid 6-3. Ken Lathem had the only hit for the All-Stars, a triple. Campbell picked up the win for New Madrid. Doyle Hutton was the loser.

From The Living Bible

When they arrived at the place where God had told Abraham to go, he built an altar and placed the wood in order, ready for the fire, and then tied Isaac and laid him on the altar over the wood. And Abraham took the knife and lifted it up to plunge it into his son, to slay him. At that moment the Angel of God shouted to him from heaven, "Abraham! Abraham!" "Yes, Lord!" he answered. "Lay down the knife; don't hurt the lad in any way."

Youth crusade to open tonight

A New Life for Youth Crusade will be conducted this weekend at Tanner Street Church of God, 619 Tanner St. The crusade will include evangelistic services at 7:30 tonight and Saturday night and 10:30 Sunday morning.

The event is open to all youth in the area and is under the direction of the Rev. Vernon Guttenfelder, pastor, and Ben Jordan, youth minister, of Tanner Street Church of God.

The crusade evangelistic team features Evangelist Victor Torres as the speaker and singing by Judy Nunnelee Herring and a boys choir from the New Life for Youth and Family Ministry Center. All are from Richmond, Va., but Mrs. Herring is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Nunnelee Jr., 1001 N. Ranney St., and is a former resident of Charleston.

Team to First Baptist

After completing the crusade services Sunday morning at Tanner Street Church of God, the crusade team will attend the evening service at 7 o'clock Sunday at First Baptist Church, 1101 N. Main St., where Torres will preach and Mrs. Herring and the boys choir will sing.

A former heroin addict and member of the savage Roman Lords gang in New York City, Torres presently is executive director of New Life for Youth and Family Ministry headquartered in Richmond and full-time evangelist who travels around the world conducting crusades.

Having overcome life in the New York ghettoes and decline into hard drugs, gang warfare and crime after finding a new life in Jesus Christ, Torres has a burden for teen-agers and families, especially those who have experienced problems with drugs, crime, etc.

Mrs. Herring, a noted soloist, teaches music in a Christian school and directs a church choir in Richmond as well as the boys choir from the New Life for Youth and Family Ministry Center. She has ministered throughout the Richmond area and in surrounding states as a concert soloist, and has just begun a tape cassette ministry of her concerts.

THE BIBLE
No. 253 Jeremiah Is Arrested

After Jeremiah had delivered the Lord's prophecies of destruction and desolation, he stood in the court of the Temple of the Lord and repeated the warning to the people, because they stubbornly refused to heed his prophetic messages.

"Now Pashur, the son of Immer the priest, who was also chief governor in the house of the Lord, heard that Jeremiah prophesied these things. Then Pashur smote Jeremiah the prophet, and put him in the stocks that were in the high gate of Benjamin, which was by the house of the Lord." (Jeremiah 20:1-2)

"And it came to pass on the morrow, that Pashur brought forth Jeremiah out of the stocks. Then said Jeremiah unto him, The Lord hath not called thy name Pashur, but Magormissabib. For thus saith the Lord, Behold, I will make thee a terror to thyself, and to all thy friends; and they shall fall by the sword of their enemies, and thine eyes shall behold it; and I will give all Judah into the hand of the king of Babylon, and he shall carry them captive into Babylon, and shall slay them with the sword." Youth rally opens tonight

A weekend youth rally for children, youth and interested adults will begin tonight and continue through the Sunday night worship service at First United Methodist Church, Highway 61 North.

Don McCracken of Memphis, Tenn., will be the evangelist for the event, which will open with a covered-dish supper at 6 o'clock tonight, followed by teen activities and a 7:30 worship service.

Bible Bowl competition for children and a singing session for children and youth is scheduled throughout the day Saturday, which also will feature a Bible activity session at 6:45 p.m. and worship service at 7:30 p.m. Various activities also are planned Sunday, in addition to the regular 8:30 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. worship services.

Jehovah Witnesses to attend convention

Area Jehovah's Witnesses will assemble for a convention Saturday and Sunday in Cape Girardeau, according to Donald Fults, presiding overseer of the Sikeston congregation, who said the convention is designed to keep delegates spiritually enlightened about present day times.

He said the theme of this convention is "Become Doers of the Word".

"The 63 representatives from Sikeston are looking forward with enthusiasm to the convention at the Arena Building in Cape Girardeau. We will be among nearly 1,000 persons from southeast Missouri who are expected to attend this convention," Fults said.

The area event is one of the many semi-annual conventions held by Jehovah's Witnesses worldwide. These are attended by the 2,179,256 Jehovah's Witnesses who are preaching in 210 lands.

Fults said, "The public is invited to hear the lecture, "Are you Doing What God Requires of You?", by F. H. Milliken, Sunday at 2 p.m. As is true at all meetings of Jehovah's Witnesses, all seats are free; there is no collection."

Youth revival set in Perkins

PERKINS — Youth revival services will begin Sunday and continue nightly at 7:30 through Wednesday at the Perkins Baptist Church, the Rev. Ray Rhyne, pastor, has announced.

The Rev. Jerry Darby will be the evangelist, Rick Bandermann will serve as song leader and Gail Bumgardaner will play the piano.

Smith Street church to host singing

The Singspirations, a gospel singing group from Cooter, will be featured on a gospel singing program at 7:30 p.m. Saturday in Smith Street Church of God, 420 Smith St. Local Singers also will participate in the program.

Nazarenes plan annual meeting

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Delegates and members of the 85 church which comprise the Missouri District of the Church of the Nazarene will gather next Monday through Friday at First Church of the Nazarene for the annual assembly and auxiliary conventions.

The district assembly will convene at 8:30 a.m. Thursday and conclude with the evening service on Friday. The Sunday school convention will begin with an evening service at 7:30 p.m. Monday and continue through the day sessions on Tuesday. The missionary convention will open with the 7:30 p.m. service Tuesday and continue through the day sessions Wednesday. A preliminary service for the district assembly will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday.

All of the activities will be held at First Church of the Nazarene, 2601 W. Independence.

The business sessions are given largely to the hearing and passing of reports. The Rev. Arthur E. Mottram, district superintendent, will read his fourth report, and the reports of pastors for their churches, district officers and committees will also be heard.

Of special interest will be matters from the 19th general assembly of the denomination which was held in June of this year in Dallas, Tex. Delegates will be asked to ratify changes in the church constitution which were approved by the General Assembly. These changes enunciate the traditionally strong ethical convictions of the denomination in terms of timeless principles drawn from scripture and reflect their cross-cultural application.

Dr. V. H. Lewis, general superintendent, will preside at the sessions of the assembly. He is one of a six-man board of general superintendents, elected at the quadrennial general assemblies, who direct the affairs of the church through the 165 districts in 61 nations of the world.

The Church of the Nazarene will be making many changes which are required by its rapid internationalization. Of the total of 586,532 members, 25 per cent are outside the United States, Canada and the British Isles. A growth percentage of 3.46 was reported in 1975. Sunday school attendance has continued to show increase at a record pace with more than a million people enrolled in its local schools. The church now broadcasts around the world in five languages: English, Spanish, Portuguese, French, and Italian.

LCMS group favors split

CHICAGO (AP) — Delegates representing a splinter group of Missouri Synod Lutherans have voted unanimously to buck the leadership of the 2.8-million-member church and begin forming their own synod.

But while directing fathers of the new Association of Evangelical Lutheran Churches (AELC) to proceed, the more than 1,000 delegates to a two-day convention declined Thursday to recommend abolishing their existing protest group.

In St. Louis, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod's Commission on Constitutional Matters issued an opinion saying congregations, pastors and teachers who join the new church can be made to forfeit their membership in the synod.

The leadership of the protest group, called Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM), had recommended abolishing the group and transferring its work to the new church. But, the amended resolution requires the approval of the convention before the group can be eliminated.

Dr. C. Thomas Smith, an executive associate of the protest group and a Manhassett, N.Y. pastor, said the resolution provides for an orderly transition of programs from the protest group to a new association of churches, and sets a constituting convention Dec. 3-4 in Chicago.

Loraine Daniel

New life event slated tonight

A Loraine Daniel New Life Crusade will be presented at 7:30 tonight at the Ramada Inn.

Presently an evangelistic speaker, Mrs. Daniel will discuss the new life ministry. The program will feature special music by Mona Dement, and Lynnell Dupont also will speak.

The meeting is open to the public.

VANDUSER — Tribute will be paid to the nation's heritage over the past 200 years during Bicentennial services planned Sunday at First Church of God, according to the Rev. Hershel Hunter, pastor.

The day will begin with Sunday School at 9:45 a.m. and will include the morning worship service at 10:45, an old-fashioned dinner at noon and the evening worship service at 6 o'clock.

In St. Louis, the Lutheran Church-Missouri Synod's Commission on Constitutional Matters issued an opinion saying congregations, pastors and teachers who join the new church can be made to forfeit their membership in the synod.

The leadership of the protest group, called Evangelical Lutherans in Mission (ELIM), had recommended abolishing the group and transferring its work to the new church. But, the amended resolution requires the approval of the convention before the group can be eliminated.

Dr. C. Thomas Smith, an executive associate of the protest group and a Manhassett, N.Y. pastor, said the resolution provides for an orderly transition of programs from the protest group to a new association of churches, and sets a constituting convention Dec. 3-4 in Chicago.

DIAGNOSING — Anne Alvarez keeps on the lookout for agricultural plant disease in Hawaii. As the Extension Service's first woman plant pathologist, she prescribes treatment for the island's ailing fruits and vegetables. Anne also keeps an eagle eye on potential problem areas where diseases could get out of hand.

UNTREATED—Left to its own devices, the cotton plant continues to bloom and put on new bolls late in the season. Most of the late bolls don't mature but only provide food for overwintering insects like the pink bollworm.

DIAGNOSING — Anne Alvarez keeps on the lookout for agricultural plant disease in Hawaii. As the Extension Service's first woman plant pathologist, she prescribes treatment for the island's ailing fruits and vegetables. Anne also keeps an eagle eye on potential problem areas where diseases could get out of hand.

UNTREATED—Left to its own devices, the cotton plant continues to bloom and put on new bolls late in the season. Most of the late bolls don't mature but only provide food for overwintering insects like the pink bollworm.

bathroom. Upon checking, he said he also found the front door open about six inches. Upon looking out a front room window, he said he saw his brother sitting in the front seat of a car on the passenger side and Moit was leaning over washing his face with a wash cloth. He said he noticed his brother's eyes were closed and said he thought Jamie was using "downers" (barbiturates).

When asked by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Steve Taylor if he had seen his brother after that, Kevin Helmes replied "no."

When authorities went to arrest Moit, they saw a car which had been described by Kevin Helmes parked at the Moit home.

Sheriff Simmons said he read Moit his rights and then asked his mother, Mabel Moit, if the car belonged to her? He said she answered that it did and gave the officers permission to inspect the auto and to take it to Sikeston for further tests.

The state then called Sgt. Bennie L. Rapert, an evidence technician for the highway patol, to the stand and asked him if he inspected the car and what he had found.

Rapert reported that he inspected the car and found some stains on the right front seat, the headliner over the passenger side, some newspapers on the floor board and under a chrome strip below the passenger door.

He said he took samples of the stains on the seat and headliner and scrapings of the stains under the door, along with the newspapers and the projectile found in Helmes' head, to the Southeast Missouri Crime Labatory in Cape Girardeau to be analyzed.

Bob Longwell, a criminologist for the Southeast Missouri Crime Lab, said he ran a test on the projectile and found it to be .380- caliber automatic ammunition and returned it to Rapert.

Longwell said the other evidence was left in his custody, and after running tests, it was found that the newspapers and samples from the right front seat and headliner were human blood of type A. He said some other swabs with stains could not be classified due to insufficient amounts of the stain.

During the autopsy it was found that Helmes' blood type was A.

Moit is presently being held in the Scott County jail under $50,000 bond.

runner up should receive it. But Spainhower has claimed the overwhelming Litton victory by about a 160,000 vote margin showed the people want a new face in the congressional delegation. He says they are looking for a break from the old politics that Hearnes, as a two-term governor and former secretary of state and state legislator, represents.

Since beginning his active campaign, Spainhower has picked up the support of top Litton campaign officials, who claimed there is "nearly unanimous" support for the treasurer from the Litton rank and file campaign workers.

Admitted supporters of the two candidates echo the campaign positions of their choices in explaining their stances.

"Hearnes ran for it. He spent his money, he spent his time, he came in second and certainly he deserves the nomination," said one committee supporter of the former governor, and another added, "We can't win without Hearnes so if we can't win with Hearnes then we ought to just fold things up and go on to the next battle."

"Spainhower is a good, clean candidate," one supporter said and another noted that "the people voted for a fresh face in the primary election."

Malden High School enrollment to hit 585

MALDEN — Malden High School's enrollment, climbing for the past several years, is expected to reach approximately 585 by the time registration is completed this week.

Principal Carl Townsend said seniors and juniors enrolled Wednesday, sophomores signed up Thursday morning and freshmen enrolled Thursday afternoon.

The first day of classes on Monday is scheduled for the full day.

Enrollment has increased every year during the nine years he has been principal at MHS, Townsend said. Approximately 145 freshmen are expected this term, along with 160-165 sophomores, about 130 juniors and 110-115 seniors.

Last year, Malden graduated 92 seniors and "We'll probably graduate well over 100 this year," Townsend stated. He believes, though, that there will eventually be a "leveling-off" period in enrollment, which will probably begin in the grade school and work its way up.

Malden is entering its second year as a Class AAA school, based on enrollment between 501 and 1,000 students.

bathroom. Upon checking, he said he also found the front door open about six inches. Upon looking out a front room window, he said he saw his brother sitting in the front seat of a car on the passenger side and Moit was leaning over washing his face with a wash cloth. He said he noticed his brother's eyes were closed and said he thought Jamie was using "downers" (barbiturates).

When asked by Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Steve Taylor if he had seen his brother after that, Kevin Helmes replied "no."

When authorities went to arrest Moit, they saw a car which had been described by Kevin Helmes parked at the Moit home.

Sheriff Simmons said he read Moit his rights and then asked his mother, Mabel Moit, if the car belonged to her? He said she answered that it did and gave the officers permission to inspect the auto and to take it to Sikeston for further tests.

The state then called Sgt. Bennie L. Rapert, an evidence technician for the highway patol, to the stand and asked him if he inspected the car and what he had found.

Rapert reported that he inspected the car and found some stains on the right front seat, the headliner over the passenger side, some newspapers on the floor board and under a chrome strip below the passenger door.

He said he took samples of the stains on the seat and headliner and scrapings of the stains under the door, along with the newspapers and the projectile found in Helmes' head, to the Southeast Missouri Crime Labatory in Cape Girardeau to be analyzed.

Bob Longwell, a criminologist for the Southeast Missouri Crime Lab, said he ran a test on the projectile and found it to be .380- caliber automatic ammunition and returned it to Rapert.

Longwell said the other evidence was left in his custody, and after running tests, it was found that the newspapers and samples from the right front seat and headliner were human blood of type A. He said some other swabs with stains could not be classified due to insufficient amounts of the stain.

During the autopsy it was found that Helmes' blood type was A.

Moit is presently being held in the Scott County jail under $50,000 bond.

runner up should receive it. But Spainhower has claimed the overwhelming Litton victory by about a 160,000 vote margin showed the people want a new face in the congressional delegation. He says they are looking for a break from the old politics that Hearnes, as a two-term governor and former secretary of state and state legislator, represents.

Since beginning his active campaign, Spainhower has picked up the support of top Litton campaign officials, who claimed there is "nearly unanimous" support for the treasurer from the Litton rank and file campaign workers.

Admitted supporters of the two candidates echo the campaign positions of their choices in explaining their stances.

"Hearnes ran for it. He spent his money, he spent his time, he came in second and certainly he deserves the nomination," said one committee supporter of the former governor, and another added, "We can't win without Hearnes so if we can't win with Hearnes then we ought to just fold things up and go on to the next battle."

"Spainhower is a good, clean candidate," one supporter said and another noted that "the people voted for a fresh face in the primary election."

Malden High School enrollment to hit 585

MALDEN — Malden High School's enrollment, climbing for the past several years, is expected to reach approximately 585 by the time registration is completed this week.

Principal Carl Townsend said seniors and juniors enrolled Wednesday, sophomores signed up Thursday morning and freshmen enrolled Thursday afternoon.

The first day of classes on Monday is scheduled for the full day.

Enrollment has increased every year during the nine years he has been principal at MHS, Townsend said. Approximately 145 freshmen are expected this term, along with 160-165 sophomores, about 130 juniors and 110-115 seniors.

Last year, Malden graduated 92 seniors and "We'll probably graduate well over 100 this year," Townsend stated. He believes, though, that there will eventually be a "leveling-off" period in enrollment, which will probably begin in the grade school and work its way up.

Malden is entering its second year as a Class AAA school, based on enrollment between 501 and 1,000 students.
